

Larry Chiem

9/18/22

CARER-110-5088

Quiz 1

This first section has helped me figure out my perception of myself by exploring new opportunities that were given to us during canvas. I am honestly not surprised on what results that I have gotten for most tests. One test though, the second test, for knowing your work personality, was very interesting, as my personality type does not directly reflect on what career choices that I was recommended. My hobbies directly correlate to what career choices that I should make, but my personality does not. It is interesting because based on being an INFP-T, I should be a social worker, but I love technology, and engineering, and that is more of an INTJ, not an INFP.

For me though, I do want to fix the world as an INFP, but through technology, and through innovation and automation. With innovation and automation, it lets us have more time to help others, and to work on projects that matter to us the most. I thought of the classes prior to this, and was asked this question, "If a non-profit went up to you and said that they have a problem and needs it to be solved, would you rather give money to a non-profit organization, or would you give your time to a non-profit organization?" At the time, I choose time because I thought it would be better for people to see with a human element, but reflecting now, I see that money does not always solve the problem directly, and having a presence can be more valuable to said organization, rather than just giving money to the solution, which sometimes does not solve the problem, and can just delay the problem later.